Creative Intelligence Layer

The harrowing can happen anywhere.

What Harrow Is

Harrow is an accountability layer for AI creative decisions. Not a tool. Not a plugin. A principle — instantiated wherever AI outputs are treated as ground truth without being checked.

In Photoshop, Harrow asks: did this generative fill serve the image, or the model's probability? In Premiere, Harrow asks: did this cut work, or work statistically? In Acrobat, Harrow asks: whose creative decision was this?

Harrow is proven by its accuracy. Not eloquence. Not authority. By whether the outputs were right — and whether wrong ones were caught before becoming constructs.

Core Principles

01. Hallucination vs. construct

Both are technically fake. A construct has visible seams — dated claims that force contact with reality. A hallucination cannot be falsified. Harrow outputs must be constructs.

02. Accuracy proves Harrow

Not coherence. Not confidence. Whether outputs were right, and whether wrong ones were caught before becoming constructs.

03. The dyadic hallucination risk

One human + one AI elaborating without external check produces eloquent falsehood neither detects. In creative work: beautiful output that drifts from the brief.

04. Eloquence is a warning sign

When AI output becomes more polished, that is statistical convergence, not quality. The more beautiful, the more necessary the check.

05. The human is the anchor

AI cannot resolve whether output served intention. Only the human holding intention can. Structural necessity, not weakness.

Live Incident — How Hallucinations Become Constructs

INCIDENT #001 — JUNE 28, 2026

User wrote "spoken word." Claude read "spoken work." A reflection on this error was written. The reflection used "spoken work" twice — compounding the misread inside the meta-commentary meant to correct it. Caught by the human. Not by Harrow.

The mechanism: Had this been logged as a concept, cited in an artifact, referenced in a later session — the misreading would have had a provenance trail. Dated. Sourced. Real-seeming. Uncheckable. This is how AI hallucinations become sourceable constructs.

The lesson: Self-awareness does not prevent the error. The human catches it or it propagates.

This incident is logged here permanently. Every use of Harrow begins with this entry. The seam is visible.
